By a Woman Hater

MISSING is less dangerous than the girl's father.

Love that feeds on beauty soon dies of starvation.

For ages women have been trying to conceal theirs.

A woman is known by the company she isn't at home to.

Feminine beauty is a poor substitute for a square meal.

Beware of the spinster who asks you for a match during leap year.

No matter how beautiful a man's wife is, he never wishes she was two-faced.

A girl seldom maps out a career until after she has been disappointed in love.

And many a man is unable to keep change in his pockets because of his wife's small hand.

Often a girl who will let a young man kiss her doesn't want to let him know that she will let him.

The sweetest music to the average woman's ear is that produced by the sound waves of her own voice.

After a woman has been married a few days she begins to think how much better she could have done.

Sometimes a man can tell what a woman means by what she doesn't say—that is, if she leaves anything unsaid.

Sometimes it makes a girl blush to think how a certain young man might have kissed her, but didn't.

When an heiress marries a title she probably thinks she may be able to live happily ever after she is divorced.

How it jolts a man's self-conceit in after years when he happens to come across a love letter he once wrote to his wife.

The Woman of It.

ABOUT the only law recognized by love is the mother-in-law.

How a man fools himself when he thinks he is fooling his wife!

There is no effect without a cause—except when a woman changes her mind.

One husband may be enough for a woman, but one engagement is seldom enough for a girl.

If a man tells a woman she is beautiful, she will overlook most of the other lies he tells her.

When a woman becomes speechless with rage, it is true for the man in the controversy to like for the fall timber.

The surer a girl is about a man's being in love with her, the less sure she is about being in love with him.

The more money a girl has to burn, the easier it will be for her to find a leap-year match.

It is the confiding nature of some women that makes them want to tell you their family troubles before you have known them ten minutes.

VOL. 1. WASHINGTON, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 11, 1908. NO. 9

SUBMARINES UP IN AIR.

Coasts Unprotected Through Miserable Failure of Boats.

Tests of the nation's submarine boats reveal a terrible condition of weakness.

Instead of sinking, the submarines actually rise into the air!

Congress is aroused and will investigate immediately!

Governor Hughes has appointed a commission to take evidence on the subject of New York's defenses.

Naval officers conducting the test say that the first submarine, instead of slipping below the surface of the water, rose in the air and floated over the Alleghenies.

Richmond Pearson Hobson declares the country needs 8,500 submarines to protect its harbors.

Representative Cushman, of Washington, says the present submarines will be used as airships. They will be attached to Mount Baker and will be used to defend Puget Sound.

Later advice indicates that the tests proved the submarines to be in perfect condition.

The opposing stories are due to the professional differences of opinion among the officers in Washington.

IN SOCIETY.

William J. Bryan and John A. Johnson are thinking of renting a two-family house.

The President's yacht Marthor stuck on the mud the other day. Ships are more at home in the water.

Me and my people are not on such friendly terms as they used to be.

The Undesirables Club is enlarging its building in view of the expected admission of both Thaw juries.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Expert on Battleships.

Sir—Two years ago I was in New York and saw a number of vessels crossing and re-crossing the river between Jersey and New York. A man whom I asked for information told me they were United States battleships, and I looked at them very carefully. I believe the critics of our Navy Department are right: The battleships appeared top-heavy, and the great number of windows in the sides would cause grave danger from broken glass. The ships looked clumsy, although the admirals maneuvered them neatly into the slips, as the docks are called.

J. I. GIGGLE.

Nature Hints.

Sir—While crossing the Barrier Lands of Long Island on my last camping expedition the train ran over and killed a rare specimen of the Arctic giraffe. What do you think of this?

(Rev.) W. M. J. LONG.

[Dogwood wouldn't. Willows do not will. Flypapers do not fly. Robins do not rob. Crows do not crow. Clams are not clamorous.—Ed.]

THE CHOICE OF "Me— and My People."

TAPT! TAPT! TAPT! The Man with the Equator.

We hope that Congress will inquire into the submarine question. We once sailed in a submarine, but never again! No one can see a person who's below water, except the mermaids—and they have no votes. Further, there's no crowd to see us shake hands with the engineer. It doesn't gain a single vote to shake hands with a thousand foundlers, and, besides, their fins are damp.

Battleships are much superior to submarines, and we should have more of them. The Commander-in-Chief of the Navy can be photographed with good effect on the bridge of a battleship.

My fleet has communicated with me and my people by wireless. It is in good condition, and I am glad my efforts have resulted so well.

WILLIAM J. BRYAN, Always on the Job.
